

September 11:
Has anything changed?

Special Section

Introduction

by the Migration Policy Institute Guest Editors

Afghanistan: conflict and displacement 1978 to 2001

by Hiram A Ruiz

Hope on the brink

by Filippo Grandi

Civil-military relations in Afghanistan

compiled by Tim Morris

Foreign policy considerations in dealing with Afghanistan's refugees: when security and protection collide

by Joanne van Selm

Receiving Afghanistan's asylum seekers: Australia, the Tampa 'Crisis' and refugee protection

by William Maley

Afghan refugees in Europe

by A-R Faquiri

Afghanistan and the challenges of humanitarian action in time of war

by Roberta Cohen

Reinvigorating resettlement: changing realities demand changed approaches

by John Fredriksson

(with case study by Marta Bivak and Ceri Oeppen)

Exclusion, terrorism and the Refugee Convention

by Monette Zard

Screening in mass influxes: the challenge of exclusion and separation

by Bonaventure Rutinwa

What does it take to rebuild a state?

by Paula R Newberg

Security and the ethics of asylum after 11 September

by Matthew J Gibney

Resources

Further reflections

Palestinians in the aftermath of 11 September: wishing refugees out of existence?

by Abbas Shibliak

Post 11 September jitters for Iraqi Kurds

by Maggy Zanger

Endpiece

Lessening tensions in a tumultuous world: The Royal Institute for Inter-Faith Studies

by HRH Prince El Hassan bin Talal