

Peace processes and peace building

December 2017

This is a selection of articles published by Forced Migration Review (FMR) focusing on peace processes and peace building. While other subjects on which FMR has published widely – such as voluntary return and repatriation – are of course very closely related to this topic, this list does not necessarily include articles on these aspects.

You will find for each: the title, the author(s), the date of publication and a link to the full issue or article online. Most of the articles are also available in Arabic, French and Spanish and many are available as podcasts (English only).

FMR provides a forum for the regular exchange of practical experience, information and ideas between researchers, refugees and internally displaced people, and those who work with them. It is published in English, Arabic, French and Spanish and is free of charge. All back issues are online at www.fmreview.org/issues. Dayton +20: Bosnia and Herzegovina twenty years on from the Dayton Peace Agreement

FMR 50, September 2015

Twenty years on from the signing of the Dayton Peace Agreement in November 1995, the consequences of conflict – including the long-term effects of displacement – were still being felt in the Western Balkans. FMR 50 examined the case of people who were displaced from and within Bosnia and Herzegovina as a result of the 1992-95 war, and reflected on the lessons that may be drawn from the successes and failures of the Agreement.

Sudan: prospects for peace

FMR 24, November 2005

The November 2005 issue of FMR provided an opportunity for reflection and debate on the protection, return and reintegration of displaced Sudanese and the opportunities for building a new Sudan. The special issue presented 36 articles written by Northern and Southern representatives of the Government of National Unity, the UN, World Bank, Sudanese and international NGOs and representatives of diaspora communities. Authors reflected on the mechanisms by which reconciliation had been promoted, the implications of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and challenges for the six-year transitional period.

Return to peace: post-conflict realities

FMR 11, October 2001

The ten articles in the feature theme addressed a range of aspects of the 'return to peace', including the relationship between several concepts of truth, justice and reconciliation; women's role in peace and in particular in Rwanda and the Balkans; and return and reconciliation in Bosnia and Herzegovina and in Cambodia.
