

Forced Migration Review

Forced Migration Review provides a forum for the regular exchange of practical experience, information and ideas between researchers, refugees and internally displaced people, and those who work with them. It is published in English, Spanish, Arabic and French by the Refugee Studies Centre, University of Oxford. FMR was launched in 1998 in partnership with the Norwegian Refugee Council.

Editors

Marion Couldrey & Dr Tim Morris

Sub-Editor (Arabic edition)

Musab Hayatli

Coordinator

Heidi El-Megrisi

Assistant

Sharon Ellis

Forced Migration Review

Refugee Studies Centre
Department of International Development
3 Mansfield Road, Oxford OX1 3TB, UK
Email: fmr@qeh.ox.ac.uk
Tel: +44 (0)1865 280700
Fax: +44 (0)1865 270721
Skype: fmreview

Website

www.fmreview.org

Copyright and disclaimer

Opinions in FMR do not necessarily reflect the views of the Editors, the Refugee Studies Centre or the University of Oxford. Any FMR print or online material may be freely reproduced, provided that acknowledgement is given to the source and, where possible, the FMR URL and/or the article-specific URL. We welcome comments on the content and layout of FMR – please email, write or use the form on our homepage.

We welcome comments on the content and layout of FMR – please email, write or use the form on our homepage.

Designed by

Art24 (www.art-24.co.uk)

Printed by

Image Production
www.imageproduction.co.uk

ISSN 1460-9819

Front cover photo:

UNDP-IRC Rule of Law Training
in El Geneina, west Darfur.
UNDP/Yousif Ahmed

from the editors

Virtually every humanitarian agency talks about their commitment to building – or enhancing – Southern capacity. Several readers and advisors encouraged us to produce an issue looking at the complex issues around this much-used but rarely-defined term. To our surprise, our call for papers did not produce the flood of articles we expected. The only previous occasion on which we received so few theme articles was when we published an issue focusing on older displaced people. Perhaps this tells us something about lack of fit between rhetoric and reality? Do international agencies still define 'capacity building' in a way which implies that Southern recipients have no capacity to start with? Is the capacity-building industry a North-driven, patronising and uni-directional transfer of knowledge? Is there genuine commitment to helping nationally-based organisations respond to future crises? The articles in this issue address these and other questions.

Apologies for the delay in getting this issue of FMR to you. In view of the gravity of the humanitarian crisis in Iraq we prioritised the special issue – 'Iraq's displacement crisis: the search for solutions' – which is being distributed with this regular FMR.

If you are reading our magazine for the first time you may be interested to know that FMR is published in English, Arabic, Spanish and French by the Refugee Studies Centre of the University of Oxford. It is distributed without charge to 174 countries and the full text of all issues is online at www.fmreview.org. If you read this but are not on our mailing list and your organisation would like to receive hard copies of future issues, please use the tear-off form on the back cover or contact us (details opposite). We will need to know your name, organisation's name, full postal address and which language edition you wish to receive.

FMR 29, to be distributed in October 2007, will focus on humanitarian reform. The theme of FMR 30, to be published in the New Year, is environmental displacement. Information about future issues is at www.fmreview.org/forthcoming.htm.

FMR is totally dependent on grant income, receiving only logistical support from the University of Oxford. If you are able to support us – or can give us funding advice – we would like to hear from you. We are always keen to keep costs to a minimum. If you no longer wish to receive FMR please let us know.

As always, we are keen for FMR to present the voices of displaced people. We would like to increase the number of articles written by those directly affected by forced migration. Don't be put off writing for us if English is not your first language. We are more than happy to work with you to help develop your ideas into an article format in order to share your experience with others.

With best wishes

Marion Couldrey & Tim Morris
Editors, Forced Migration Review

This is the last FMR I will be co-editing. After eight extremely rewarding years I have decided to move on. I am confident this magazine will continue to play the vital role within the international humanitarian community which has made it such a pleasure to work for the FMR team, with authors and with you, the readers. With my best wishes to you all.

Tim Morris (tim@timmorris.info)

The FMR Co-Editor job will be advertised in due course on the FMR website. For any queries, please contact fmr@qeh.ox.ac.uk.

The Editors are grateful for support received in 2007 from:

Austrian Development Agency	International Organization for Migration, Iraq	Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs
Brookings-Bern Project on Internal Displacement	International Rescue Committee	UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA)
Catholic Relief Services	Islamic Relief	UNDP Sudan, Governance and Rule of Law Unit
DanChurchAid	Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs	UNFPA
Danish Refugee Council	Norwegian Refugee Council	UNHCR
Department for International Development (DFID)	RA International	UNICEF
DHL	Reproductive Health Access, Information and Services in Emergencies (RAISE)	Women's Commission for Refugee Women and Children
Feinstein International Centre, Tufts University	Government of Qatar	World Vision Australia
International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies	Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (SDC)	