From the Editors

Europe is experiencing the mass movements of displaced people in a way that it has largely been immune from for decades. The ramifications and manifestations of what is being called a ‘migration crisis’ are extensive, intersecting with national as well as pan-European politics, existing economic problems, xenophobia, fear of terror attacks, and much more. This crisis, in effect, seems to dwarf in scale and complexity any other crisis that Europe has faced since the end of the Second World War.

The manifestations are as disparate as the building of fences to stop people crossing normally peaceful borders, the deaths of people transported by smugglers in unseaworthy boats, EU political leaders bickering over a Common European Asylum System and the numbers they will or will not allow into their respective countries, and contentious responses to the disaster that continues to unfold in Syria. Alongside this we also see an upsurge of grass-roots compassion, solidarity and assistance to those whose human suffering on a grand scale in and around Europe constitutes the reality behind the rhetoric.

In this issue of FMR, authors throw legal, practical, moral and experiential light on a variety of the multifarious issues and manifestations that make up this ‘crisis’.

We would like to thank Elizabeth Collett of the Migration Policy Institute Europe, Madeline Garlick of UNHCR, Cathryn Costello of the Refugee Studies Centre, and Richard Williams for their assistance as advisors on the feature theme of this issue. We are also grateful to the International Organization for Migration, the Open Society Foundations, the Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs and UNHCR’s Regional Bureau for Europe for their financial support of the issue.

Reader survey: Please will you answer 5 questions to help us adapt the ways we provide FMR? http://tinyurl.com/FMR-Survey

Marion Couldrey and Maurice Herson
Editors, Forced Migration Review
Destination: Europe

Foreword: Banking on mobility over a generation
François Crépeau (United Nations Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights of Migrants)
Europe need not renounce its freedom of movement; it should instead develop a better controlled mobility regime. It would then, in effect, much better control its borders.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/crepeau

Migrants, refugees, history and precedents
Colin Bundy (University of Oxford)
There is much about earlier migration crises that today’s European policymakers might profitably recall.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/bundy

Refugee protection in Europe: time for a major overhaul?
Maria Stavropoulou (Greek Asylum Service)
A number of myths surrounding refugee protection may obscure our understanding and complicate the search for solutions, but there are also clear and realistic possibilities for change in the EU’s body of law to enable better outcomes for states and for refugees.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/stavropoulou

Simplifying refugee status determination
Kelly Staples (University of Leicester)
There is a persuasive case to be made for simplifying refugee status determination in the European Union.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/staples

Arrivals on the island of Lesbos, summer 2015
Fotini Rantsiou (volunteer)
Lesbos, population 85,000, received more than 85,000 refugees and migrants in 2015 up to the end of August.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/rantsiou

It need not be like this Cathryn Costello (University of Oxford)
Creating space for smugglers and failing to provide humanitarian assistance is European failures. Opening legal routes to Europe could deal with both.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/costello

The Mediterranean challenge within a world of humanitarian crises
William Lacy Swing (International Organization for Migration)
While the high number of migrants and refugees arriving in Europe in 2015 has increased pressures and tensions, this is not a crisis beyond the capability of Europe to manage together as a Union. We need bold, collective thinking and action to develop a truly comprehensive approach.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/swing

A network of camps on the way to Europe
Irit Katz (University of Cambridge)
While makeshift camps, such as those that have proliferated around Europe, may form spaces of resourcefulness and agency which cannot be accommodated in state-run detention camps, none of these temporary spaces is a definitive solution.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/katz

Trickery in Dublin’s shadow
Marco Funk (independent)
Border practices at the Italy-Austria border are part of a wider trend of questionable practices used by EU Member States which render irrelevant both the Schengen Agreement and the Dublin Regulation.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/funk

Abuses at Europe’s borders
Duncan Breen (independent)
Refugees and migrants have been regularly subjected to widespread rights violations by officials at some European borders. The EU needs to allow more legal avenues for people seeking protection to reach Europe safely.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/breen

Melilla: mirage en route to Europe
Frida Bjørneseth (Aalborg University)
Among those who have reached Melilla, there seems to be no consensus as to whether they see themselves as being in transit in Europe or still in Africa.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/bjørneseth

Search and rescue in the central Mediterranean
Hernan del Valle, Rabia Ben Ali and Will Turner (Médecins Sans Frontières)
Although people are aware of the risks of the sea crossing, nothing can really prepare them for the experience.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/delvalle-benali-turner

Safety, rescue at sea and legal access
Stefan Kessler (Jesuit Refugee Service)
If it is to live up to its own values, the EU needs to step up search and rescue operations in the Mediterranean and open up legal means for access to protection in Europe in order to avoid the need for risky journeys across the Mediterranean.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/kessler

Migrant arrivals and deaths in the Mediterranean: what do the data really tell us?
Frank Laczko, Ann Singleton, Tara Brian and Marzia Rango (International Organization for Migration)
The policy and media gaze focuses on numbers of migrant arrivals and deaths. There are problems in the data for both categories.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/laczko-singleton-brian-rango

Irregular migration by sea
Irregular migration by sea is not a solely Mediterranean phenomenon.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/migration-by-sea

Afghan and Somali (post-)conflict migration to the EU
Nassim Majidi (Samuel Hall)
There are invisible drivers of migration for Afghans and Somalis to Europe, caused by decades of conflict. Although officially considered as ‘post-conflict’, the reality is very different.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/majidi

Understanding why Eritreans go to Europe
Mogos O Brhane (independent)
Why do Eritreans risk their lives on perilous journeys to Europe? Why don’t they stay in neighbouring countries where they could get safety and protection?
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/brhane

No option but Europe
Yotam Gidron (consultant) and Olivia Bueno (International Refugee Rights Initiative)
Asylum seekers’ stories point to the need for effective protection for refugees and to facilitate greater opportunities to access it, both within Europe and beyond.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/gidon-bueno

Iraqi refugee households in Jordan: the active search for solutions
Mirjam A Twigt (University of Leicester)
For Iraqi refugees in Jordan the decision to leave for Europe is very much influenced by the experience of waiting in the region.
www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/twigt
Tragedy on the way to Europe: a perspective from Africa
J O Moses Okello (former UNHCR)
As Europe grapples with the challenges of responding to the arrival of large numbers of migrants, it is vital to keep in mind that the people involved have not left their homes and countries for no reason. Many of them would rather have stayed at home. In a sense, they were forced into migrating.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/okello

EU cooperation with third countries: rethinking concepts and investments
Elizabeth Collett (Migration Policy Institute Europe)
Despite ‘externalising’ its immigration agenda, the EU has largely failed to develop a coherent and effective overall strategy, to the detriment of migrants and would-be asylum seekers.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/collett

The road more travelled? Onward movement of asylum seekers and refugees
Madeline Garlick (UNHCR)
The phenomenon of onward movement creates formidable challenges for states, asylum seekers and refugees, and the international protection system as a whole.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/garlick

European Union readmission agreements
Mehdi Rais (independent)
The use of readmission agreements has prompted a debate on their compliance with international law, in particular the provisions on protection for refugees and asylum seekers.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/rais

A coast-guard officer’s perspective: reinforcing migration through legal channels
Konstantinos Karagatsos (Hellenic Coast Guard, retired)
Given that we cannot always rescue refugees or economic migrants in danger at the EU’s maritime borders, efforts are needed to reinforce legal channels for migration to Europe and to prevent refugees and migrants being exploited by organised criminal networks.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/karagatsos

The extra-territorial processing of asylum claims
Sarah Léonard and Christian Kaunert (University of Dundee) Calls for the creation of asylum processing centres outside the EU are being renewed. But significant objections and obstacles remain.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/leonard-kaunert

Refugees in Serbia: on the way to a better life
Maša Vukčević, Jelena Momirović (Danish Refugee Council) and Danka Purić (Belgrade University)
More than 450,000 people passed through Serbia from the beginning of 2015 until the middle of November. However, even in 2014 the numbers were large, and growing.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/vukcevic-momirovic-puric

Passing through Greece
Marco Mogiani (SOAS, University of London)
The eagerness of refugees and migrants to leave Greece and travel to other European countries is quite evident.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/mogiani

Bulgaria’s struggle at the frontline
Eleanor E Roberts (University of Oxford/Oxford Aid to the Balkans)
Bulgaria has struggled to deal appropriately with mass irregular migration. It has also failed to address integration.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/roberts

Protecting asylum seekers in mixed flows: lessons from Bulgaria
Mariya Shisheva (independent)
In the context of a large number of arrivals, states may introduce blanket measures aimed at preventing irregular migration. These, however, may curtail the rights of asylum seekers.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/shisheva

Envisioning a Common European Asylum System
Volker Türk (UNHCR)
A bolder approach is needed if the European Union is to overcome fragmentation and manage refugee movements effectively and in accordance with international obligations. Imaginative moves in this direction could also advance the global refugee protection regime.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/tuerk

Are asylum and immigration really a European Union issue?
Joanne van Selm (consultant)
Attempts to find an EU-wide solution to asylum may be preventing the finding of workable solutions at the bilateral or national level.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/vanselm

Social protection: a fourth durable solution?
Carolina Montenegro (journalist)
Although asylum seekers and refugees in Europe and in Latin America are very different in terms of numbers, a solution being implemented by Brazil and Ecuador may show the European Union a way forward on sharing the responsibility within a regional bloc.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/montenegro

In search of fairness in responsibility sharing Philippe De Bruycker (Université libre de Bruxelles) and Evangelia (Lilian) Tsourdi (Université catholique de Louvain)
The cycle of mutual mistrust between EU Member States that prevents solidarity can only be broken if responsibility is assessed fairly on the basis of objective indicators.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/debruycker-tsourdi

Volunteers and asylum seekers
Serhat Karakayali (Humboldt University) and J Olaf Kleist (University of Oxford/University of Osnabrück)
People in communities where asylum seekers and refugees have appeared offered various forms of support to the new arrivals as states failed to provide even the essentials.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/karakayali-keist

A welcoming policy in post-socialist East Germany
Anna Steigemann, Frank Eckardt and Franziska Werner (Bauhaus-University Weimar)
Apparently, East European countries are less willing to accept refugees than other European countries. Their experience of ethnic and cultural diversity is weak and a genuine welcome has still to be developed.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/steigemann-eckardt-werner

Migration terminology matters
Paola Pace (International Organization for Migration) and Kristi Severance (independent)
Failure to employ correct terminology has consequences beyond semantics. More efforts are needed to educate people – especially those whose words are widely disseminated – in the correct use of migration-related terminology.

www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/pace-severance

All back issues of FMR are freely available online at www.fmreview.org to read or download.
Ukrainian asylum seekers and a Polish immigration paradox
Marta Szczepanik (Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights) and Ewelina Tylec (Institute for Law and Society)
The recognition rate for Ukrainian asylum seekers in Poland remains at an extremely low level, with the concept of ‘internal flight alternative’ serving as the legal basis for rejection of many asylum applications. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/szczepanik-tylec

Separated and unaccompanied children in the EU
Rebecca O’Donnell (Child Circle) and Jyothi Kanics (National Center of Competence in Research)
A growing body of EU law, policy and practical measures address the situation of separated and unaccompanied children who arrive in the EU. However, in the current sensitive political climate, there is a risk of attention and resources being diverted from building on progress. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/odonnell-kanics

Removing ‘non-removables’
Katharine T Weatherhead (University of Oxford)
EU law and policy on non-removable irregular immigrants – such as unsuccessful asylum seekers who cannot be returned to their country of origin – have political and humanitarian consequences. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/weatherhead

Europe, don’t copy Australia
Keeya-Lee Ayre (researcher)
Praise for Australia’s policy of turning away asylum seekers is misguided. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/dneych

Europe and the future of international refugee policy
El Hassan bin Talal (West Asia–North Africa Institute)
There is new thinking – which should be embraced by European leaders – on how to promote long-term responses to the Syrian refugee crisis that protect and uphold human dignity, and that constitute more sustainable and beneficial solutions in refugee-receiving states in the West Asia–North Africa region. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/binatalal

Choices, preferences and priorities in a matching system for refugees
Will Jones and Alexander Teytelboym (University of Oxford)
We propose a ‘matching system’ that simultaneously gives refugees some choice over where they seek protection and respects states’ priorities over refugees they can accept. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/jones-teytelboym

Legal and practical issues raised by the movement of people across the Mediterranean
Guy S Goodwin-Gill (University of Oxford)
The movement of people is a phenomenon we must learn to live with and to manage as best we can in the interests of all. Among other matters, this will require states dealing with each other on a basis of equity and equality, rather than outmoded and unrealistic expectations of sovereign entitlement. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/goodwingill

From Syria to Brazil
Marília Calegari and Rosana Baeninger (University of Campinas)
Precisely because of the difficulties Syrians face in entering the EU, Brazil has opened up to them. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/calegari-baeninger

General articles

Economic reintegration of returnees in Liberia
Naohiko Omata (University of Oxford) and Noriko Takahashi (UNIDO)
Since the early 2000s, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization has been implementing economic recovery programmes for returnees in certain post-conflict countries. It remains uncertain, however, to what extent these training programmes have been instrumental in returnees’ economic reintegration. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/omata-takahashi

Thirty years of development-induced displacement in China
François Dubé (University of Ningxia)
To accelerate the process of poverty reduction in its poorer regions, China decided in 2001 to implement a national programme of displacement of populations living in areas considered environmentally fragile. But these programmes were hardly a novelty for China, and the record of previous such attempts has been far from positive. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/dube

Refugee Status Determination (RSD) in Albania
Xymena Dyduch (lawyer)
A study of Refugee Status Determination decisions in Albania – a relatively new European country of destination – reveals some shortcomings, despite the country’s efforts to develop its procedures in line with international standards. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/dneych

The face of refugees
Jesus Quintanilla Osorio (missionary)
Personal contact with refugees helps us not only to see the people behind the need but also to better understand the obstacles they face. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/osorio

Challenges to the right to work in Ecuador
Adeline Sozanski, Karina Sarmiento (Asylum Access) and Carlos Reyes (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid)
The right to work is important for refugees and asylum seekers – to support themselves, to facilitate local integration and to contribute to the host society. However, they often face obstacles in accessing work in host societies and their experience is frequently characterised by poor working conditions and discriminatory practices. www.fmreview.org/destination-europe/sozanski-sarmiento-reyes

Copyright:
FMR is an Open Access publication. You are free to read, download, copy, distribute, print or link to the full texts of FMR articles, and this Listing and the magazine, as long as the use is for non-commercial purposes and the author and FMR are attributed.

Authors who publish with FMR retain copyright subject to the grant of exclusive licence to FMR. All articles published in FMR in print and online, and FMR itself, are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs (CC BY-NC-ND) licence. Details at www.fmreview.org/copyright.